

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

The present invention relates to analytical methods, platforms, and devices for the rapid and efficient immunochromatographic determination of one or more components in fluid samples. The devices are especially useful for identifying analytes in small volumes of whole blood samples utilizing one membrane principally for separating particles such as red blood cells from plasma and a second membrane as the site for reactions to identify the analytes.